1. BACKGROUND

Roma represent one of the most vulnerable groups in the Republic of Moldova. Roma face discrimination and multiple barriers to social inclusion, employment, education, health care and other services. There is a high degree of intolerance and hostility towards Roma held by the majority population. Romani women encounter multiple discrimination - as Roma, as women and in many cases also as persons belonging to a low socio-economic class. Romani women experience greater risks of social exclusion and poverty than men of their community and women from the ethnic majority. This lack of equality is seen in violence against women, access to employment, education, decision making positions and social services. Romani women rarely benefit from reproductive health services that are available at the community level, and often are not even aware about the availability of such services. In 2014, UN agencies in the Republic of Moldova published a comprehensive study on the situation of Romani women in Moldova: <http://www.un.md/docsandpub/>

In 2011 the Government of the Republic of Moldova approved the Action Plan to Support Roma Ethnic Group in the Republic of Moldova for 2011-2015, which was elaborated with a support of the UN family in Moldova. The plan includes inter alia a set of actions to address the needs of Roma women in such areas as employment, education, health care, social inclusion, participation in decision making, etc. In October 2013, the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) expressed concern inter alia at the fact that there is not currently a single Romani woman in any position of elected authority anywhere, at any level in the Republic of Moldova. In December 2013, a network of Romani women and girls was constituted, to aim at strengthening the rights of Romani women and girls in practice in the Republic of Moldova.

Beginning in 2014, UN Women, jointly with UNDP, under the "Women in politics" program is supported by the Government of Sweden to strengthen the empowerment of women in political life, in particular in the context of national elections and local elections in the Republic of Moldova in 2014 and 2015 respectively.
