Prior to the detailed evaluation, the Purchaser will determine the substantial responsiveness of each Proposal to the Request for Proposals (RFP). For purposes of these Clauses, a substantially responsive Proposal is one which conforms to all the terms and conditions of the RFP without material deviations. The Purchaser's determination of a Proposal's responsiveness is based on the contents of the Proposal itself without recourse to extrinsic evidence.

A Proposal determined as not substantially responsive will be rejected by the Purchaser and may not subsequently be made responsive by the Offeror by correction of the non-conformity.

22. Evaluation and comparison of proposals

A two-stage procedure is utilised in evaluating the proposals, with evaluation of the technical proposal being completed prior to any price proposal being opened and compared. The price proposal of the Proposals will be opened only for submissions that passed the minimum technical score of 70% of the obtainable score of 700 points in the evaluation of the technical proposals.

The technical proposal is evaluated on the basis of its responsiveness to the Term of Reference (TOR) and the Instructions to Offerors.

In the Second Stage, the price proposal of all contractors, who have attained minimum 70% score in the technical evaluation, will be compared. The cumulative analysis scheme will be applied with a total score being obtained upon the combination of weighted technical and financial attributes. An Offeror's response to the solicitation document is evaluated and points are attributed based on how well they meet the defined desirable criteria. Cost under this method of analysis is rendered as an award criterion, which will be 30% out of a total score of 1000 of all the desirable factors of the RFP. The contract will be awarded to the offeror obtaining the highest cumulative score. The following formula will be applied in calculating the cumulative score:

$$B = T + \frac{C_{low}}{C} \times 300,$$

where

$T$  – is the total technical score awarded to the evaluated proposal;

$C$  – is the price of the evaluated proposal; and

$C_{low}$  – is the lowest of all evaluated proposal prices among responsive proposals.

for an organization to undertake a Study on demand and supply of child care facilities in urban and rural areas of Moldova from the angle of ECD importance for child survival and development of women's employability

Background

The importance of child care education and availability of corresponding facilities is recognized internationally and from the women's human rights perspective represents an essential element for employability of women and reconciliation of family and work responsibilities. On the other hand, access to universally available, high-quality and inclusive early childhood services and facilities will help children to unlock their potential and will lay the foundation for future learning skills and therefore their future success on the labour market.

Childcare in Moldova was traditionally viewed as the responsibility of women being the main caregivers in the family, while men were always viewed as breadwinners. This led to voluntary and forced labour disruptions for women, associated with paid leave for child care for 3 years followed by unpaid leave for child care of 3-6 years old. Official data reveals persisting differences in wages of women and men, including inadequate system of calculation of minimum salary, pensions and social benefits of women. In 2009, the average salary of women represented only 76.4 per cent of the average salary of men.<sup>1</sup>

Women tend to leave the labour market for a longer period of time (3-6 years) due to child birth and underdeveloped system of pre-school institutions. Women from rural areas have limited opportunities for employment due to the lack of child care institutions: if in urban areas almost 85% of children are enrolled in pre-school institutions, in rural areas - only 54%<sup>2</sup>. Therefore, the availability of child care institutions can have a significant impact on the ability of women to obtain and retain employment.

The recent study on Women's Needs Assessment carried out by UN Women in four rayons of Moldova<sup>3</sup> revealed that lack of vacancies in preschool institutions or lack of these in some localities does not allow some women to get employed because they need to take care of their children. In all focus group discussions women who said that they would like to work but cannot do this because they do not have persons with whom their children would stay. According to the same study presence of children in the household is one of the main factors affecting women's employment in rural area and that family responsibilities are the basic reason for 18% of the unemployed women, while for those with children, 30% are unemployed because of family responsibilities.

This data clearly indicates that the availability and quality of childcare services can help reduce the impact of family responsibilities on women's employment rate. There is need for a comprehensive study that would help establish the real demand in services driven by the employability needs of women with preschool children and correlate it with the existing opportunities of accessing ECD services.

Although in the last several years Moldovan authorities have made considerable efforts aimed at improving the access of children to early education and development, the demand for kindergartens and crèches has grown even faster, and the number of children per available place has increased. Thus, according to the statistics, there were 1,380 kindergartens operating in the country in 2010/2011 (245 more pre-school institutions than in 2000), serving 130,041 children. The gross rate of enrolment in pre-school education has risen from 66.1 percent in 2004 to 77.1 percent in 2010. About 31,540 children were enrolled in the school preparatory groups. However, there are still about 200 localities with no preschool services, and the gap between gross enrolment rates in urban areas (91.9 per cent) and rural areas (66.1 per cent) is significant. Pre-primary institutions network still misses the most vulnerable children - about 23 % of the children aged 3 to 6 were not enrolled in pre-primary institutions so far, and the most of these children were living in rural and remotes areas which are without pre-school institutions. The largest number of children living in communities with no kindergarten is being attested in Causeni (1350), Ungheni (1263), Floresti (773) and Nisporeni (739). One case study shows that in the Village Trestieni where there are 120 children and no kindergarten, only 5 out of all women-mothers are being permanently employed. At the same time, statistical data are revealing that the number of children born by single mothers remain to be as high as 23%.

Starting from the importance of the early care and education of children for their further development, it's worth mentioning the necessity of improving parenting skills, especially in most disadvantaged families and rural areas. These are skills relating to child feeding, hygiene, timely recognition of danger signs and correct management of sickness, and cognitive and intellectual stimulation of children. As a recent study (National Survey on Early Childhood Care and Development: family Knowledge, Attitudes and Practices, UNICEF, 2010) demonstrates, the opportunities for early care, literacy and language development are often reduced in poor Moldovan households. Thus, less than a third, 27.8 percent of children eat meat or fish every day (44 percent in urban areas versus 17.4 percent in rural areas). Only a half of children under 7 years receive dairy products every day (62.4 percent urban versus 41.9 percent rural). The levels of awareness about the danger signs, such as fever or difficulty breathing, are still moderate: a half 48.8 percent could name one to two signs and only 9 percent know 5 to 7 danger signs. Only 28.8 percent of parents read to their children every day and the practice of every day reading depends also upon location (37.6 percent in urban versus 23.2 percent in rural areas), as well as upon the education and the socio-economic level of parents. Preschool education providing increased learning opportunities can have a strong equity contribution by helping particularly the poorest to have the opportunities for early literacy and language development they are missing at home and helping them to be ready for school and learning.

Research proves that the skills developed in early childhood form the basis for future learning and labour market success. ECD enhances a child's ability to learn, work with others, be patient, and develop other skills that are the foundation for formal learning and social interaction in the school years and beyond. Failure to develop these foundational skills can lead to long-term, often irreversible effects on educational attainment, health, fertility, and productive earnings, which later result in significant costs for both parents and governments. As they get older, children living in poverty are likely to experience poor school performance, including high rates of repetition and dropout, as well as high fertility and morbidity rates, which contribute to costly inefficiencies in the education and health sectors. They are also more likely to have low productivity and income, to provide poor care for their children, and to contribute to the intergenerational transmission of poverty (Grantham-McGregor, 2007), and they are less likely to contribute to the growth of their country's economy.

Developmental delays before age 6 are difficult to compensate for later in life because early childhood is a particularly sensitive period for brain formation. Indeed, neurological studies have shown that synapses (that is, connections or pathways between neurons in the nervous system) develop rapidly during this period, forming the basis of cognitive and emotional functioning for the rest of the child's life (Young and Mustard 2007). Both, proper nutrition, especially from conception to age 2, and stimulation in the first 5 years of life play a critical role in the process of brain formation and development.

Another economic advantage of ECD intervention is that it enhances both efficiency and equity and offers a cost-efficient way to produce a well-trained and capable workforce, and leads to better outcomes for those at greatest disadvantage (Heckman and Masterov 2007). In addition to the direct impact of ECD interventions on young children, positive externalities can occur in the areas of girls' education and women's labour force participation. Indeed, evidence suggests that affordable child care for young children can increase the school enrolment rates of older female siblings to a greater extent than even an increase in maternal wages.

Given the above mentioned, UN Women and UNICEF have planned to undertake a study on demand and supply of child care facilities in Moldova including from the angle of Early Childhood Development importance for child survival and development and women's employability and job retention. The results of the study will be used to provide policy recommendations to relevant Ministries, especially to the Ministry of Education in the course of education sector reform.

Scope of Work and Objectives

Under the direct supervision of UN Women WEE Program Manager and in close coordination with the ECD Program Officer of UNICEF, the selected company is expected to analyse the impact of availability and accessibility (and other factors) of child care facilities (early childhood development and pre-school education) on the employment of women in rural and urban settings of Moldova. This study will be closely coordinated with the Ministry of Labour, Social Protection and Family, Ministry of Education, Ministry of Health and other relevant institutions.

More specifically, the company is expected to fulfil the followings:

- Objective 1: Analyse demand and supply of child care facilities (early childhood development (0-3 y.o.) and pre-school education (3-6/7 y.o.) under public, private and other forms, including community establishments for children 0-3 and 3-6/7 in urban and rural areas from the angle of ECD importance for child survival and development in women's employability;
- Objective 2: Identify legal and normative barriers for establishment and functioning of various types/forms of child care facilities in rural and urban areas of Moldova by reviewing current legal and normative acts that regulate child care in the Republic of Moldova;
- Objective 3: Develop a map of women's employment status in relation to availability of child care facilities in rural areas.
- Objective 4: Propose 2-3 models of ECD services, along with costing, in rural areas of Moldova for children under 3.

For successful implementation of this assignment it is expected that the selected company shall work closely with an International Consultant identified and selected jointly by UN Women and UNICEF. The functions of International Consultant will include but won't be limited to:

- Provide guidance and advice to the company during the entire process of elaboration of the study;

- Provide models of best international/regional practices of ECD services for children under 3, help adjust them to the national context, if appropriate and cost them;
- Provide inputs to the first and last Drafts of the Study Report;
- Provide recommendations for finalization of the study.

Note: The Offeror is encouraged to recommend a potential candidate to be hired as International Consultant to work under this assignment and submit the Curriculum Vitae of potential candidate along with the proposal.

The specific description of the objectives and actions to be completed:

Under the Objective 1: The study is expected to provide a current situation of the supply and demand for child care facilities (early childhood development and pre-school education). Special attention is to be made to the demand and supply of the mentioned facilities among disadvantaged groups of population, including disabled, poor families, ethnic, religious and other minorities, with special focus on Roma population. Communities and localities, which are physically severely excluded from the mainstream development areas in rural areas should be specifically targeted by the study.

For measuring the Demand side, the following indicators to be taken into account, but not limited to:

- Share of children in various types of ECD and PSE facilities (by sex, age, vulnerability group, number of children in the family) in urban and rural settings;
- Number and share of children living in communities over time, by rayons, sex, vulnerable groups, urban and rural (this can be also related to changes in the overall population over time);
- Number and share of children/families that need alternative child care facilities in their communities/need for particular kind/s of care;
- Employment status of female heads of households with one or more children in relation to the employment status of male heads of households with the same number of children;
- Affordability of ECD and PSE services (given that group 0-3 is not covered by state budget) by various types of institutions;
- Criteria that are important when parents are selecting ECD and PSE facilities vis-à-vis current services that are available in the country;
- Share and Number of families currently receiving subsidies for child care (disaggregated) Etc.

Supply part of the study should take into account the following, but not limited to:

- Number, type and capacity of ECD and PSE facilities in urban and rural areas;
- Type of care currently used by parents;
- Types of services provided by these facilities (long/full day, short programs);

- Quality of services vis-a-vis parents' expectations.

Under the Objective 2: the company is expected to undertake a review of the existing legislation and regulations for child care facilities in Moldova, and identify, based in the gaps between the demand and supply, legal and normative constraints for initiating alternative types of child care, especially where the state is not covering certain groups of children, such as 0-3.

Under the Objective 3: the study is expected to identify and measure the effect of women exclusion from the labour market due to unavailability of child care in their communities. The study will have to measure and quantify the effect of the lack of child care facilities on women's employment and/or self-employment, and identify where this barriers are having the strongest effect.

Under the Objective 4: the Contractor is expected to study the best international/national practices of ECD services for children under 3, identify 2-3 models, cost them and recommend for piloting.
